Colorado River Camping

Lees Ferry Campground: Operated by NPS. 54 designated sites. No hookups. Modern bathroom/comfort station, potable water available, launch ramp 2 miles, gas and store at Marble Canyon about 5 miles. No reservations. Fees apply.

Upriver Camping:
Do not boat below the cable downstream from the launch ramp. There are dangerous rapids below the cable. Downstream waters are restricted. A permit is required from Grand Canyon National Park to float this section of the river.

Camping is limited to 14 days.

Camping is permitted in designated areas only. Upriver campsites are provided with toilets and raised fireplaces. All campsites are located well above the river and require a short walk from your boat. This is to prevent camps from being damaged due to high water releases, such as those that occurred in the summer of 1983.

Fires are permitted only in the fireplaces provided or in portable fire pans. No ground fires are allowed. If portable fire pans are used, all burned charcoal must be carried out.

Collection of wood is prohibited.

Carry out all litter and garbage. There is no regular garbage collection upriver. Plastic litter bags are available free of charge at the ranger station. Dumpsters are available at the launch ramps for garbage disposal.

Federal law prohibits the disturbance, defacement, or removal of historic or archeological sites. Do not deface rocks and cliffs. Do not disturb plants or animals, and do not feed wildlife.

There are no fees or permits required to camp upriver. Entrance fees and vessel use fees apply.

Boat Camping and Back-country Camping in Glen Canyon

Camping on the shoreline of Lake Powell is a great experience. Although the majority of the lake is accessible only by boat, there are a few places that are accessible by vehicle.

We strongly encourage you to explore our back-country areas via foot or by vehicle on designated roads. Many roads within the backcountry are accessible by 4-wheel drive only.

The main channel varies in depth from 100 – 600 feet deep. It is recommended that you anchor on a beach for the night as high winds can move boats into rocks causing damage. You can camp anywhere on the shorelines of Lake Powell except in developed marinas.

There are no motor vehicles, ORV's or bicycles allowed in Glen Canyon's roadless areas.

All campsites are required to have a portable toilet unless toilets are available on the vessel or are within 200 yards of the campsite. Regular water quality checks are done to ensure compliance with sanitation laws. Pets are allowed on beaches as long as waste is cleaned up. Dispose of waste properly. Burying waste of any kind on the beach is prohibited. Waste may not be contained in plastic bags unless it is a NPS approved Waste Bag Containment System, which must be disposed of in the trash..

When anchoring multiple houseboats on the same beach, park at least 100 feet apart to help reduce carbon monoxide buildup.

It is not a good idea to tie powerboat or jet-ski lines to houseboat anchor lines as they can cause the anchor lines to come loose. Do not camp under overhanging rocks as down pouring rain can sink a vessel.

Ground fires of only wood are allowed below the high water line. Fires must be contained to 4 feet wide and 4 feet high. Fireworks are illegal.

When planning a camping trip by boat or 4-wheel drive road in Glen Canyon, it is best to buy a map beforehand. These show the side canyons, good hiking spots,, points of interest and marinas, explain the navigation system, and may give fishing information. In an emergency you will need to report your location on Marine Band 16 or call 1-800-528-4351.

There is no camping fee or permit required to camp on the lake in undeveloped areas. However, entrance fees and vessel use fees apply.

Camping is limited to 14 consecutive days, 30 days maximum in a calendar year.
